Memorial Tree Program - giving back to the environment

A large selection of our solid timber caskets and coffins, plus our full Return to Sender and Expression Coffin ranges, are a part of our Memorial Tree Program.

Look for the Memorial Tree Program badge on selected models throughout this catalogue. When a family purchases one of your caskets or coffins from our Memorial Tree range, a tree is planted on the family's behalf (at no cost to you or the family). I'm proud to say, since the start of our program we've planted 7,774 memorial trees. See page 6 for more information.

Memorial Tree Program

Giving back for a greener future

About the Memorial Tree Program:

What is a Memorial Tree?

- A memorial tree is a tree that is planted as a way of memorialising the life of a special person.
- It's a living legacy of a family's loved one.

How does Ashton's Memorial Tree Program work?

- When a family purchases a casket or coffin from Ashton's Memorial Tree range, a memorial tree will be planted on the family's behalf.
- Ashton will organise for the memorial tree to be planted by non-profit group the Men of Trees society.
- The Memorial Tree Program logo is displayed throughout the catalogue to show which models are a part of the program.

Where is the Memorial Tree planted?

- The Men of the Trees plant these special trees where they will best serve the community, such as a local park, an urban environment or a rural location.

Why do funeral homes offer this program to families?

- It helps mourners begin to heal and grow by creating a more meaningful experience.
- It creates added value for families when they choose from this range.
- It can help to overcome some families' objections about purchasing a more expensive casket or coffin.
- Some families may be more inclined to choose one of these casket or coffin models, knowing that they are helping offset the use of timber and natural resources, and that there will be a living legacy of their loved one.
- It demonstrates a funeral homes' awareness of the importance of environmental conservation.

What you'll receive from the program:

Letter:
Explains the program for families and the tree planting actions taken on their behalf.

Individually numbered certificate:
To be given to the family. Has space for the deceased's name and your funeral home name.

Envelope:
To be given to the family. It contains the letter and their certificate.

What makes our coffins and caskets unique?

Many of us are too busy to recognise the abundance of our lives. If we stop and think, we can observe successes, contributions, expressions, creativities, commitments, maybe even deep spiritual connections.

We must celebrate the abundances of privilege that has been bestowed upon us. In some way, we all lead abundant lives.

'Why fit in when you were born to stand out?' - Dr Seuss
Give everyone a chance, everyone is good at something.
I believe everyone fits in somewhere, even if you haven't quite found your place yet.

Keep moving the blocks until you find your fit. Life can be hard, but when everything comes together, there is beauty, happiness and satisfaction – many things to celebrate.

Stories of life need to be heard and celebrated in joyful, colourful, modern ways. This Expression Art Series piece embodies those thoughts and encourages positive conversations of acceptance.

In this painting you will see birds swirling; perhaps fighting, perhaps struggling. The free bird is majestic in the light, higher and gilded in gold. The two below are more fractured, perhaps hurt, angry, possibly pensive.

The white and purple hues surrounding this conflict enhance feelings of spirituality and peace. The message may be that from something negative, we can find something positive. The painting is about setting something free, away from conflict, into peace, into the light.

In life we give flowers for remembrance, for success, to say sorry, to say thank you, to say I love you or just because..... and in death we do the same.

Flowers hold us up and give love and riches. They can pull you from the darkness and centre your soul. Even if only for a moment. They softly give.

Paper Veneer Coffins

The paper veneer coffin range is characterised by simpler designs and finishes. A thin sheet of paper, printed with a wood grain effect, is glued to an MDF substrate. This creates a simulated timber look which is lacquered, painted or left unpolished.
